1999 Homecoming Celebrates Colonial Pride

Joi Dunn
STAFF WRITER

This year's Fall Homecoming court and game had an array of many different faces. Clay students were really excited about this year's court. There was a lot of good competition. We played the Elkhart Central Blue Blazers, who had been previously undefeated, with a victory of 35 to 14. The Blazer's star halfback and cornerback, Tedric Harwell, was suffocated by the Purple Swarm.

Senior Lamond Brown was asked about his feeling on being crowned Homecoming King, and his response was, "I was happy and excited. I felt like I was on top of the world. It was really an honor and a dream come true." He also said, "I really didn't know if I would win because I was in competition with the star basketball player, Michael Miller, the captain of the football team, Robert Jackson, and basically a lot of important people."

Senior Tanya Hannah was crowned Homecoming Queen. She commented, "I was surprised, excited and ecstatic all at the same time. I feel like being crowned with Lamond was destiny."

At the dance Hannah and Brown shared the first slow dance. Hannah said, "The dance was a moment to remember for life."

So if you missed this year's Fall Homecoming, you missed a lot of special things on and off of the field.

The Senior class made their presence known at this year's pep assembly.

Here's To You, Ms. Richardson

This year Clay has a new Director of Guidance, Ms. Diane Richardson; Ms. Diane Richardson replaced Mrs. Mary Beth Byrne, who retired last year. Every time you go to the office to see Ms. Richardson, you'll get a big smile and a sweet candy. She has a neat office plastered with pictures and

"It was really busy in the beginning," Ms. Richardson said. Even though it's the sixth year for her to be a student counselor, there are still some challenges for her in a totally new environment. "I'm glad for the help I received from Mr. [Earl] Hairston and Mr. [John] Grabowski."

years. "It was the most wonderful time I had, I loved it so much!"

Experiencing different cultures is one of the reasons that she decided to go to Brazil. It was very hard in the beginning, "I don't know how to speak Portuguese, I couldn't even go to the grocery store!" Everything was totally different. "Now thinking back, it really helps to understand what is it like to go through changes."

She knows a lot of teachers at Clay. Mr. Joseph Good is one of them who said, "We grew up together. She was mean to boys in eighth grade..... But all in all I want to say she's bright, talented and hardworking. She has a great sense of humor, and I feel so lucky to have her here at Clay."

One of Ms. Richardson's favorite things is, travelling. She has been to Europe, Mexico, Canada, and Thailand. "I love to visit different countries and cities, those are the special challenges in my life," commented Ms. Richardson.

The new school year has begun, and things are getting back to normal. "Hopefully, I can spend more time working with students and less time working on the computer."

Ms. Richardson is glad that everyone here is so helpful. Next time you stop by her office, be sure to say hello.

purple/gold decorations. Surprisingly, that isn't her favorite color, but she has turned the office from black, to purple and gold just for Clay. The fact that she is bright and approachable makes students feel comfortable to sit down and talk with her.

Ms. Richardson isn't totally new to Clay. "I started my career wanting to be an English teacher at Clay Middle," said Ms. Richardson. She was at Adams for a year. After that, she went to Rio de Janeiro in Brazil, South America, with her 7-year-old daughter for three

Where Are the Books?

Jacob Schpok

As some of you may know, there are a few classes that are lacking books this year. This list includes some that are required to graduate. What many students don't know is that Clay isn't the only school that is having this problem. The situation is common both locally and nationally for schools to be short on books. Some of the departments affected are Foreign Language, Science, and Mathematics.

The problem started early in the summer when administrators had to order books for this year. Clay was expecting 1168 students to attend this fall, but as the summer progressed more and more students started enrolling. At the beginning of the year a head count rounded out at about 1280 students.

When can you expect your textbooks? Right now Clay is at the mercy of the publisher. Since we are not the only school with this problem, the publishers have been overwhelmed with requests for more books. Principal John Harris explained, "It generally takes until the end of the second quarter to get those extra books."

"It is hard to predict how many books to order for the upcoming year. Most books cost around $50. If we order too many we could end up wasting a lot of money," said Harris. In order to prevent this dilemma Clay students need to enroll for school sooner than they have been. That way the problem could fix itself before trouble even begins.

What do girls want? This is the question that mankind has struggled with for its entire existence. Is there any man out there that knows the answer? I don't think so. I don't even think most women know, so there couldn't be a good answer. It seems that girls are constantly changing their minds, and they expect you to figure out what they want. If you fail, well every guy knows the consequences.

Guys also can have their mood swings, but it's understandable. There's a lot of pressure put on the guy in a relationship. Guys can't forget anniversaries, birthdays and every little special occasion better be taken care of. There is no margin of error, that's it. In no way am I trying to say that every relationship is like this. Roles can be reversed. I'm just relating what the typical guy might think.

I'm not saying guys are never at fault. Girls have to put up with a lot. For instance, how many girls have ever been riding in a car when you suddenly notice a raunchy, pungent smell? Or how about being stood up because your man would rather go to a party with his boys than go out to a candle light dinner or see a movie with his significant other?

Everyone in a relationship is responsible for trying to keep it running smoothly. There's more than one person involved. Forgiving and forgetting is the key to a healthy relationship, but only if that's what both people want. If it isn't, then you can forget about ever establishing any feelings for that person because nothing good will possibly become of it.

The Bottom Line: Clay Criticism

Michael Szymanski & Evan Witt

While Evan and I were on our way to the English hallway during lunch one day, we were chased down by the security guards and asked for our passes. At the same time as all this was happening two girls, (probably freshman) walked right passed us and the "guards" didn't look twice. This event inspired the following thoughts.

We began to weigh the pro's and con's of a lot of simple subjects around school.

For example, the stink in the restrooms...what's up with that? Does anyone ever wonder what happened to all the mirrors? As for the pro's, well there isn't any. The next topic would be the bookstore. They don't sell any books. And why can't we buy candy at lunch. One useful thing about the bookstore would be that Mrs. Debra Mitchell, who runs the store does sell a lot of school supplies that have come in handy in a bind.

Then we come to the parking lot. For all you people who insist on parking diagonal, booooo! An advantage of our parking lot would be that we don't have to pay for parking. Some schools do, but the money goes for the security of the cars parked on the property.

Passing periods, !!!Notice!!! There is more than one staircase, use them. A simple tip to the lovers, stop smooching' and walk! Besides that, what up with the people that just stop in the middle of the hallway to talk. A pro of Clay's passing periods would be the length. Penn only has five minutes and their school is twice the size as ours.

Evan and Mike kick back for a little R. and R. in the library.

The next topic on our agenda is our security staff. They have been putting their lives on the line for us since 1996. Not to mention Officer Eric Kaser who has been here for four years; his presence always makes school seem safer.

In conclusion, we believe that there are a lot of good things at this school. There are also a number of things that could use some improvement. If you have enjoyed this article please make a comment to anyone on the Colonial staff. If you didn't, mind your own business and look for more to come from Mike and Evan in the issues to come.

American Life Told From Foreign View

Masa Basic

My homeland, Croatia, is small country in Eastern Europe. And yes, we do have the internet and McDonald's. When I came here, everybody kept asking me how I decided to come here, so far away from my family, friends and everything I knew and associated with for almost 17 years. To be honest, I don't know. One of the reasons is just a need for something called adventure. What could be better than living for one year where all your dreams can turn to reality? My advice is to be careful of what you dream of.

American values and way of living are pretty much different from those I used to see back home.

Allow me tell you a little bit more about differences I noticed here.

One of the first rules is one about success--it is the most praised thing in millions of immigrants, and has been taught to generations of American children. It's almost impossible to criticize success.

Going to McDonalds is the closest thing to home for Masa

American life. All the Americans want to "make a success of themselves." This is the "American Dream," well known to Americans love their freedom and privacy. They don't want anyone interfering with their lives. They want people to 'stay off their backs,' 'stay out of their way,' and most of all, 'mind their own business'. "Time flies when you're having fun." They have various kinds of entertainment, especially TV, but also try to turn other activities into fun. For example, shopping is fun. Eating is fun, and if it's not enough fun, we will put a playground inside the fast-food restaurant. 'Time is money.' Wasting your time is as bad as wasting money, so Americans schedule everything and hurry everywhere. The proof is all these drive-ins and drive-thrus. This is just a few thoughts of mine regarding the land that everybody is dreaming about. There is no better place than your own home. The air just tastes better.

Movie Withdrawal? Here's a Cure

Have you ever suffered from movie withdrawal? When you experience this one way to attempt to relieve yourself is to visit the website. In doing so, you might not always get what you are looking for. Comparing the movie itself to its website can be lots of fun as well as dull and boring. We decided to take this into our own hands and evaluate six hot movies of the summer and their websites.

First on the list was The Blair Witch Project. We know most of you out there saw the movie, but did you know that it became popular because of its website? Okay, to give you the jist of the movie: three film students went out in the woods in Maryland to shoot a documentary and they all disappeared. And whaddaya know, a year later their footage was found. How convenient! All in all, the movie was okay, but a little shaky and it kind of made you seasick. The website, however, was great! The news format in which it was set up made it seem as if it really happened. There are a lot of pictures and various areas where you can get background information on the actors and its actual filming. On an alphabetical range, we give it an A!

Next on the list was The Sixth Sense. The movie was a blockbuster hit but not much is to be said about the website. A brief synopsis: a little kid is haunted by his secret: He sees ghosts. In a desperate attempt to rid himself of a bad memory, a psychiatrist (Bruce Willis) helps the kid and all is well. Even though the movie was great, the website was boring and lacking in content. There were no good pictures or background information. On the scale, it gets a C.

Now that you've seen two contradictory examples, we'll briefly give you something to base your choices on.

Open a newspaper, read a magazine, turn on the television, surf the net, or go to a major store, and you see the Sega symbol in your face. On September 9, the Sega Dreamcast came out, being the first of "The Big Three" out of the gate with the new next-generation video game system. Their pre-order estimates at 250,000 Dreamcast units plus on average two games for every Dreamcast units sold, as well as extra controllers and VMU, with an estimated total income of $60 to $80 million dollars in the first 24-hour period. The Nintendo 64 only made $20 and Star Wars Episode 1: made 28.5 million in the first 24-hours alone.

Sega Dreamcast creates incredible living worlds, and its stunning 3D graphics will leave your eyes wide open. If that's not enough, Dreamcast will prepare you for an online revolution, taking the gaming experience far beyond the walls of your home as well as a future add-ons to the system such as being able to upgrade and play DVD's. In the works is a Dreamcast ZIP drive which will open endless possibilities for players.

In a recent article from Games Business, they asked Bernie Stolar, the president and CEO of Sega of America, "What will you do to prepare for the arrival of Nintendo Dolphin and Sony's next-generation Playstation2?" Stolar replied, "Will Dolphin really be there next year? I have a hard time believing that. They've never made a date yet. Playstation2? I don't think, however, that their software will be able to push that hardware. I believe we have two Christmases to ourselves. I think the year that becomes the real war, the real Deathmatch, is 2001. That year the truth will be this: "Who has the best software?"

On Sept 18 Playstation released news of the Playstation2 coming out in fall of 2000, so it makes you wonder, will Sega still be able to hold on even with one year under their belts?

Thomas Bond, Scott Weaver, and Darius Mitchell all liked the new game system. "It's tight" But Sophomore Joshua Hunt said, "Don't like it." Thomas said, "I plan on buying it." Scott and Darius already got theirs and Joshua said "No way I just don't care that much for it." Will Dreamcast be able to hold their own, or will Playstation2 crush the competition again like they did with Super Nintendo? And Sega Saturn? I guess we'll see?

Join The Club, You May Be Surprised

YaShekia & YaVonda Smalls
STAFF WRITERS

There are a good many clubs, sports, and activities that are available to students at Clay High School. Various clubs and youth organizations can be beneficial. "How?" You may ask. Well, clubs and sports help you to increase your sociability, improve some of your academic and/or athletic skills, and most importantly, help you to become active at Clay. And don't forget—having a long list of clubs or activities sets a positive image for you when applying for jobs or scholarships for college. But you don't have to take our word for it!

Students and teachers at Clay also agree that involvement is beneficial. Freshman Corinne Sassano plays soccer and says that, "It's a great sport to play. It involves a lot of physical contact. Soccer is the best sport to do if you want to run a lot. You meet a lot of cool people and become great friends with them."

Freshman Kim Arter is involved with Flags and says, "I like being in Flags because I get the chance to get to know new people and compete with other schools in the mid-west. I am really looking forward to the trip to Florida next spring break with the marching band."

Mr. Guy Morriscal, Quiz Bowl director and math teacher, stated that clubs benefit and help students because "they give students an outside activity to do in their free time." He expresses his belief that people should join clubs by stating, "I think there should be a club, sport, or outside activity for every student. Some students with too much free time might find activities to do which are not very constructive. An activity might eliminate some of this problem."

Mr. Timothy O'Neil, Health teacher and head baseball coach, responded by saying that clubs and sports benefit and help students because, "the students can budget or must budget their time in order to survive. Sports build character, teamwork, and self-discipline—all of which help later in life!" He goes on to say, "I believe students should get involved with as many activities as possible. It's fun and worth their time and effort!"

Well, now you've heard it, but the choice is entirely up to you. What clubs or sports are you interested in? If you're not a part of one, then maybe it would be a good idea to join one. To get details and information about certain groups and activities, look out for the announcements or contact the curriculum directors listed in your student handbook.

"The fans represent every Friday night," said senior football player Eric Brusda. "I liked when the volleyball team wore 'wife-beaters, they looked fire'" said senior Michael Szymanski.

Senior Adam Darrow blurted out "This is the best football team we have had since I've been at Clay, and I just want to say to the team,

Senior wrestler Alan Rubin, an aspiring WWF superstar, said "I liked getting beat up by Scott Clayton at homecoming." Senior Scott Clayton agreed, "I loved regulating on Alan Rubin on the senior float." The football team now stands 5-2 after Tough game against Penn.

Tonight, Clay is taking on Adams for the city championship, an honor that Clay hasn't had for years.

Sectionals have started in soccer and other fall sports. The boys and girls soccer teams are doing well this year and look to do great in sectionals. Every sports team does better when their stands are filled with enthusiastic fans. So the next time Derb raises his right hand and yells at the top of his lungs, be sure not to leave him hanging.

Put Me in Coach; I want to Score!

DUSTIN SCHMITT
STAFF WRITER

It's time to breakaway from high school talk and start looking at what pro and college sports have to offer. First of all, the homerun derby between Big Mac (Mark McGwire) and Slammin Sammy Sosa. Last year it regenerated baseball, the fans totally forgot about the strike of 1994 and fell in love with baseball all over again. This year it's already being treated like as though nothing special has happened, both Sosa and McGwire have hit 60 homers this year for the second season in a row! In over a hundred years it had only happen twice before 1998 when Babe Ruth hit 60 in 1927 and Roger Maris hit 61 in 1961. Now it has happened four times in the last two years. It use to be that 25 dingers a season was a powerful year; now it's been move up to 40 just to become an all-star. Unfortunately the derby of this year will never and could never be as dramatic as last years.

Football has begun in both pros and college, and so far it has been one of the oddest starts in history. Did you know that though the first four weeks of the NFL season that the final four teams from last year (the Jets, Broncos, Vikings, and Falcons) have started the year a combined 3-13? This year I would watch for the Raiders and the Redskins. The Raiders have the toughest schedule of any team in the NFL and the Redskins have one of the easiest, but that doesn't matter. By the end of the year, they will both be in first place in their respective divisions. Former Clay standout Jon Gruden, the head coach of the Oakland Raiders has gotten a new quarterback in Rich Gannon to go with former Notre Dame superstar receiver Tim Brown. With a great defense and a new restructured offense the Raiders have become a top team in the NFL. The Redskins have also made some major changes including new quarterback Brad Johnson. He has brought last years Minnesota Vikings offense, which scored more points last year than any team in history to Washington, and you can tell the difference already.

For you Bears and Colts fans, they have improved, but an 8-8 season from the Colts is the best you can expect from either one of them this year. Edgarrin James, the Colts rookie running back, is going to be a star by the end of the year.

In college, raise your hand if you have lost money or have just been extremely annoyed by the Notre Dame's Little Sisters of the Poor, oops I mean football team this year. They're off a 2-3 start, granted it's been a tuff schedule so far, but they have played just awful this year. Purdue has gotten off to a good start and we'll mention Florida St. at 5-0 ranked #1 in the country on their way to another national title this year.

Senior Co-Captain Luke Dillon may have summed up this year's boy's soccer team when he said, "The key to our success is team unity".

And that seems to be the attitude of all the members of the guy's soccer team. Whether they are cooking out before a football game or reffing MSA games on the weekend, the soccer team is working together.

Hopefully they can pull together to accomplish this year's goals, winning NIC and the Sectional Title. With key returning starters: Seniors Elliot Farnham, Evan Witt, Seth Ponder, Luke Dillon, Colin Harding, Rob Irvine, Eric Randolph, Art Cafiero Juniors Justin Rupert, John Lehmen, Sophmores Ken Mikals-Adachi, Adam Ponder, and Nathan Hyde, everything is in line for a successful season.

So far the Boys' soccer team is 8-5-2 overall and 5-1 in the NIC. "Our biggest win this year was when we beat Adams in the final 22 seconds of the game." Said Senior Co-Captain Seth Ponder.

When they aren't on the field the team enjoys playing "Shady Lady" which is explained by Senior Colin Harding as "Old Maid, but with a lot of cheating. It can get pretty intense. We also like joking around with Sophmores Nathan Hyde and Seth New." The atmosphere at practice is fun even with all of the running.

The soccer team has a lot of talent. They have a core of returning varsity members and plenty of younger players that will help shape the team. The team should be very competitive in the area this year and for years to come.
